The earliest programme dates from 1886 and is thought to be the second, but the show appears to have grown from the markets and fairs held in the middle of Mull from early times. There is the site of an old fairground at NM 489454 (RCAHMS page 242.) There is also an account of a show being held in 1846 (details of prizes awarded see AGRICULTURE 03-007 and NISBET Letter of 26 October 1847. This may have been one of the District competitions for improving the breed of livestock run by the Highland & Agricultural Society of Scotland. Shows for the Mull District were reported in 1836-01-30, 1837-02-01 and 1844-02-28 (See extracts in MUS LIB) but the society in its present form appears to have started in the late 19thC, though there is a report in the "Highlander" of an annual show in 1873 in Mull at Salen [CURRIE 02-007/ 03] Miscellaneous material in this box includes book of expenses as well as material such as posters and newspaper cuttings etc.	AGRICULTURE 02	L

	Material pertaining to archaeological sites and excavations. Mull has great archaeological riches and the Museum celebrates this in a variety of exhibitions from the Mesolithic through to the early historic period. Iron age forts abound on Mull and there are crannogs and castles (ruined or otherwise) of the medieval period and later. A photographic record of standing stones compiled by Dr Bill Clegg is available in the exhibition and the archaeologist's report by Jo Wright on the Baliscate stones is in the Museum library I-H.1 and 2. Standing stones at Ardnacross and Glengorm have also been the subject of excavation. Much of the material pertaining to the excavation of an early Christian chapel at Baliscate may be found in ARCHAEOLOGY 02 and a publication "Baliscate . . . 2010-2014" describes this community project. A brief general guide to Mull's archaeology is "Mull: Monuments and History" which has useful maps of all sites, based on those listed in RCHAMS volume "Argyll 3"	ARCHAEOLOGY		L

	Sketch of reputed cemetry by Pat James. The cemetry is situated at the side of Loch Cuin (Loch A' Chumhainn) just beyond a footbridge that leads to Creit Dubh. The cemetry is thought to have been separate from any village or church as it was for victims of a contagious disease (cholera/typhoid/smallpox). It is also the site of a previous saw pit, probably connected with boat building (as suggested in the sketch). Since the sketch was made a new house has been built adjacent to the site and any archaelogical content/context has been lost.	ARCHAEOLOGY 01-0	D	L

	Aros Estate papers. Aros estate comprised the former Drumfin estate, once the property of Hugh MacLean of Coll. It belonged subsequently to Alexander Crawford who added Tobermory, the former British Fisheries lands which he purchased from David Nairne of Drumkilbo in 1845. In 1856 the estate was sold to Farquhar Campbell and in 1873 it was acquired by Bryce Allan who died shortly after. He probably never lived there but he left leaving the estate to his son Alexander, who enlarged and improved the building whilst living at Badarroch. The mansion was demolished in 1962. 	Miscellaneous material pertaining to artists and craftsmen operating on Mull. Includes fine and decorative arts. Perhaps the best known artist who found inspiration in Mull and Iona was W.C. Crawford (1879-1960) a painter who was much influenced by the Scottish colourists. In fine arts, the silversmith, Alexander Ritchie became the official custodian of Iona Abbey and he established a workshop on Iona where his work was in the forefront of the Celtic revival. 	The early church was the church of the Word – the written word of the Latin bible copied by monastic scribes and learned by rote by their pupils. Literacy remained largely confined to the clergy and the nobility/gentlemen throughout the medieval period. Gaelic was the language of the common people until well into the nineteenth century and remained largely (though not entirely) oral. After the reformation, education became a duty of the parish system and the church and number of voluntary organisations took on responsibilities of education into and beyond the Education Act of 1872, making education compulsory until the age of 13. Many of these, such as Industrial schools, had specificc objectives. "Parliamentary School" was built adjacent to Tobermory church, through government grant in 1832 and replaced by a new school in 1910. New buildings were constructed across the road and opened in 1978, the old school continuing as a primary for some time until it also moved and an Arts Centre (An Tobar) was opened in the premises. The Museum collection includes copies of school logbooks from all around Mull and a good number of early school photographs.	EDUCATION

	The earliest "census" of Mull was taken of the inhabitants of the Argyll estates in 1779 (ROLLS 01-016), though the Old Parish Registers (003) cover some of the earlier dates and that of Kilninian and Kilmore goes back to 1766. The official census was begun in 1841 and taken every ten years thereafter (D). A synthesis of this material was created in card-index form by Jo Currie (PUPITRE). Other sources that may prove useful for family history are Jo Curries "Mull Family Names" and her "Macleans" (Library 2.B-1) Archival material such as assessment rolls, and registers of voters can be found in ROLLS 01 and the EDUCATION boxes include attendance registers. The school logbooks are of limited help as names are rarely given but the Museum has a good collection of early school photographs and an extensive collection of memorials in burial grounds, particularly in the north. 	Material pertaining to military activity. The most active military force prior to the first world war was the Argyll and Bute Volunteers. During the first world war, Loch na Keal was briefly home to the ships of the Grand Fleet and in the second world war the harbour at Tobermory was used as a naval base for working up the escort ships for the Atlantic convoys. There was also an RAF presence at Carsaig and there are two aircraft crashes on the island that date from the second world war.	FORCES		L

	The long geological history of Mull has made it a mecca for geologists ever since early travellers came to gaze upon the wonders of Staffa and MacCulloch (1773 – 1835) wrote his classic series of letters to Sir Walter Scott The Highlands and Western Isles of Scotland, 1824. The latest volcanic event on Mull, the tertiary volcanic activity of 60 million years ago has covered the island in basaltic rock but beneath it, and peeping out from under its skirts are rocks of almost every previous age back to Lewisian gneiss of 2000 million years ago. Rosalind Jones, "Mull in the Making" (Library 2.B-1) and "Mull in the Shaping" (Library 6.C-7) give an introduction to the geology and ice age of Mull whilst J.E, Richey et al "The Tertiary Volcanic Districts of Scotland" (Library 5.D-18) sets Mull in the context of neighboring Ardnamurchan and islands such as Rum, Skye, St Kilda, Rockall and Arran	GEOLOGY

	A general history of Mull has yet to be written though much may be gathered from guides to the island, clan histories and folk lore. Jo Currie's "Mull, the Island and its People" provides an introductory chapter to the pre-nineteenth century history and continues into the eighteenth and nineteenth history of the island with a wealth of information from documentary sources. 	Papers pertaining to the island of Iona and to St Columba. St Columba landed on Iona in 563 and founded a monastic settlement there. The existing buildings date from the founding of the Benedictine Abbey (dedicated to St Mary) in about 1200, built on site of St Columba's church The Abbey was rebuilt c.1500. The monuments of the island were the subject of a separate volume, Argyll 4 by RCAHMS. In 1899 the 8th Duke of Argyll relinquished ownership of the Abbey to trustees and restoration took place between 1902 and 1910. In 1979, the island was sold by the Duke of Argyll and came into the ownership of the National Trust for Scotland. Monastic buildings restored by the Iona Community through public subscription. 	There are at least 20 islands lying off Mull or associated with it. Links with the Small Isles (Muck, Rum, Eigg) and with Coll and Tiree were much closer in the past than they are today. Ulva and Staffa have archives of their own but there is a scattering of information here and throughout the archive about the smaller islands such as the Treshnish Islands where the naturalist Frank Fraser Darling spent time studying seals (Library 2.A-8), Gometra which is almost joined to Ulva, the barren Eorsa, Inch Kenneth, which was once owned by the Mitford's and has a fine collection of carved stone, Little Colonsay where the last chief of Macquarrie spent his final years, Erraid, where the building stones for the Skerryvore lighthouse were assembled and which features in Stevenson's "Kidnapped" and tiny Frank Lockwood's island, associated with the defence lawyer in the trial of Oscar Wilde. 	In 1937 a decision was made to establish a new station on the west coast and Tobermory was selected and her first lifeboat, the “Sir Arthur Rose” came on station in 1938. Manning difficulties led to the closure of the station in 1947 and it was not re-opened until 1990 when a Waveney class lifeboat came on station to be replaced by an Arun in 1991 and then a Severn in 2003. 	David Livingstone was born in 1813 in the mill town of Blantyre. His grandparents had lived at Lettermore on Mull and subsequently in Ulva and where “Livingstone’s Cave” was a temporary home to them whilst a croft house was being built. their son, Neil Livingstone was the father of David and migrated, with his wife, to seek work in the Lowlands. David was born in the mill town of Blantyre and worked in the cotton mills between the ages of 10 and 26. In his late twenties he was able to study medicine in Scotland and London and became an explorer in Africa. He died in Africa, in what is now Zambia, in 1873. Livingstone was a well represneted family name in Mull in the nineteenth century (see Jo Currie, "Mull Family Names for Ancestor Hunters", 1998)	LIVINGSTONE		L

	In 1847 Queen Victoria visited Tobermory in the Royal yacht "Victoria and Albert" creating a tourist opportunity in the "Royal Road to the Isles." (Library 2.G-19). Four years later, In 1851 G & J Burns sold 9 ships to David Hutcheson in partnership with his brother Alexander and brother-in-law David MacBrayne. In that year P.S. Duntroom Castle was the first of the Hutcheson fleet to sail to Mull. In 1861 screw steamers were introduced. On retirement of the Hutcheson brothers in the late 1870s, the firm was left in the hands of David MacBrayne and renamed. It was another opportune date as the railway reached Oban in the summer of 1880 and other railway connections to the west followed. Expansion of the company continued albeit with a dip in the First World War. In 1953 the company became part of the state owned Scottish Transport. and Caledonian MacBrayne was born. In the 1960s-1980s the roll-on roll-off services became standard and in 1990 the company became wholly owned by the Scottish Government. In 2006 Caledonian MacBrayne became CMAL (Maritime Assets) and CAL-MAC (ferries).	MACBRAYNE		L

	Information pertaining to the Clan Maclaine. Clan Maclaine, whose lands centred mainly upon Lochbuie, is generally regarded as a branch of Clan Maclean All branches of the clan lost land as a consequence of supporting Stuart claims in the late 17th and 18thC. At the beginning of the 20th, the Macleans of Duart regained the castle (without much land) and have since been regarded as, de facto, the senior branch, despite Clan Maclaine's claim to primogeniture	MACLAINE		L

	Material pertaining to the clan Maclean and individual Macleans. The origin story of the clan goes back to Gillean of the Battle Axe, descended from the Cenél Loairn. Gillean fought at the battle of Largs (1263) which ended the Norse supremacy of the western seaboard. It was his great-great-grandson Iain Dhu Maclean who established the clan in Mull from which the two branches, Maclean and Maclaine were to spring. The Duart Macleans married into the Macdonald Lords of the Isles becoming a junior clan to them and acquiring much land. They were represented on many of the most famous Scottish battlefields, including Bannockburn (1314), Harlaw (1411), Flodden (1513 and Inverkeithing (1651) and, more locally to Mull the Battle of Bloody Bay (1484). Their downfall came in the late 17th century when they backed the wrong (royalist) side. Duart Castle became a pawn in this struggle but was finally lost to the clan in 1691. The two classic histories of the clan are J.P. Maclean "A History of the Clan Maclean", 1889 (Library 2.C-29) and "The Clan Gillean" (1899) (Library 3.D-13)	MACLEAN	L

	Material mainly pertaining to the annual Mendelssohn on Mull music festival, but with some information on life and music of the composer. Mendelssohn (1809-1847) and his friend Karl Klingemann visited Fingal's Cave on 8th August 1829. Although he may have already have had the music for the Hebrides Overture running in his head, the sights and sounds of Fingal's Cave lie behind the Hebrides Overture, one of his most famous works. 1912	MacLean Gathering, Duart August 1912. In 1673 the Campbells took Duart from the MacLeans and garrisoned it until 1681. After the deposition of James II, Sir John, 20th chief tried to seize it back but was defeated and left for exile in France in 1691. The castle was not to come into Maclean hands again until 1911 by which time it was in ruins. Sir Fitzroy Donald MacLean, was active in bringing the castle back to the chieftainship and the clan gathering of 1912 saw the beginning of the restoration. LARGE PHOTOS 03	P/00001	110/27A	WR

1985	Wreck on Calve Island Said by Iain Macdonald to be the Anna Bhan, by Jimmy Campbell to be an admiralty diving boat possibly from galleon Salvage. Anna Bhan was last sailing vessel to operate commercially out of Tob. A lugger owned by Macmasters she ran regularly to the sand and gravel quarry betwen Salen and Craignure. There she would be beached and her cargo space filled using wheeelbarrows. At the pier in Tobermory, she was off-loaded with the Pier's hand winch. Note information from Ann Maclean (Beadoun) that she was named after Nan MacPhail and owned by Donald MacVicar, Morvern Cottage who was Nan's uncle.	P/03702	CD00104	WR
	Wreck of the Alice Roberts on Calve Island. Built in France as crabber and originally worked out of the Channel Is. Bought by Hector MacPhail, Tiree who used her for lobstering off West side Coll & Tiree and out to St Kilda . . . An unusual feature of the Alice Roberts was that she had a large tank amidships with a continuous flow of pumped sea water to keep shellfish alive. 3images. 02 shows the forward mast looking north towards wreck described under P/03702 and 03 looking south with Jean Whittaker climbing mast	P/03703	CD00104	WR

1890s?	These numbers which would have been 234-235 in the McVean Album are not allocated. The numbers 234-235 are missing. It seems unlikely that a double page (front and back) containing only two photographs would have been removed. The numbering of 233 and 236 seem to be either in a different hand or done on a different occasion and the no 6 of 236 looks very like a 4. Simple error in numbering therefore is the most likely explanation.. MCVEAN 01	P/04234-P/04235	26/13	WR

c1890	Quadruple photo collection of Mull scenes. Clockwise from top left: Dervaig (26907), Victoria Street (26827), Tobermory Bay (serial number missing) and Tobermory Main Street (11037). Fourth photo shows Aros Hall apparently without roof, perhaps dating the picture to c1890 as the hall was refurbished then after a fire. Other interesting features: Dervaig shows what is now the shop (previously village hall) without a roof and cottages opposite this building which were replaced by council houses. Also interesting view of back gardens with produce. Victoria Street photo shows street with two unroofed houses, prior to pavements being built.	P/05603		WR

	Material pertaining to the piers of Mull mainly the Old, Mishnish and Salen Piers. The earliest to be built in Tobermory was the Old or Fishermen's Pier built between 1812 and 1814. This pier dries out at low water and a new pier was built on Mishnish estate land and opened in 1864. This pier is now [2017] owned by Caledonian MacBrayne's CMAL (Caledonain Marine Assets) and usually referred to as MacBrayne's Pier. A small pier was established at Ledaig, to serve the needs of the distillery (the "Sinclair Pier") and extended in the 1970s using material from the Poor House, demolished at Newdale (information about this may be found in TOB 07). During the 1939-1945 war a small and temporary pier was built by the navy at the foot of Back Brae. P/00055 is a photograph of this.	PIERS		L

	Records of old villages and deserted settlements on Mull. There was a variety of reasons why settlements in the were abandoned, Whilst the most notorious was the Highland clearances, most of which took place in the first half of the nineteenth century, not all the settlement ruins of Mull are clearance villages. Sickness took its toll in wiping out settlements and voluntary emigration and the universal drift away from the land also took people away to the cities of central Scotland and beyond. 	Papers pertaining to John Sinclair (1770-1863) businessman and entrepreneur in Tobermory at the beginning of the 19thC, one of his enterprises being to start the distillery in 1798, having previously been engaged in the kelp industry. The land on which he built the distillery was occupied by dwellings at the time, and it is said that the inhabitants consented to giving up property on promise of jobs as distillery workers. (Brown & Whittaker, "A Walk Round Tobermory" p. 47) In order, it is said, to avoid pier dues, he built a small pier coming out from the shore south of the old Baptist chapel. This pier was extended with rubble from the Poor House by a later distillery owner and is now buried beneath the car park. He later bought parcels of land in Morvern which were to form part of the Ardtornish estate.	SINCLAIR 01		L

1884	To Stella from Cairo. Stella has started her organ lessons again and begun singing. Huntly began piano lessons but soon gave up as it was too difficult and too expensive. Stella is going to perform at school concert	SLOAN 02-003/01/1884-04-20		L
1884	To Amy, written on passage down the Nile between 20th and 25th of May. He is sure he will be sent home as the doctor on board says that he certainly shan’t be allowed to stay out. The boat he was on was so heavy they could not go over the sandbanks without great difficulty, resulting in a 3 day journey instead of 1½ Hot weather caused many men to become sick. Medical board awarded him 4 months’ leave, which with the travelling is about 3 months in England. Expects to reach England about 12th June. Amy is going to visit Ireland.	SLOAN 02-003/01/1884-05-20		L
1884	To Stella from [Abdui] Barracks Cairo. It seemed certain his regiment would not be wanted up the Nile, so the Colonel reluctantly gave him leave. Won “Shooting Challenge Shield” They have a very large garrison at present, 6 or 7 infantry regiments, cavalry and a lot of artillery, around 6000 men. complains his regiment is only 500 men, 400 below what it should be Camel Corps arriving and they are going to the Pyramids and Lord Wolseley is not ready for them. 1922-2017	Records of the Scottish Womens' Rural Institute on Mull. On Mull the earliest institutes were at Gruline (1922), Tiroran (1922), Pennyghael (1922) and Bunessan (1930) all now closed. Other institutes opened in Torosay (1928), Tobermory (1929), Fionnphort, Salen and Dervaig. Institutes were grouped into Federations, roughly the same areas as counties, and in the 1930's Mull became a Federation. For a short while it included Morvern and since the 1980's Tiree Institute has been part of the Mull and Tiree Federation. Dervaig closed in 2014. All the other institutes meet monthly at time of writing (2017). In 2015, after endless meetings and consultations, and a good deal of disagreement, the SWRI dropped the word "Rural" from their title and became SWI. In 2017 the centenary of SWRI was celebrated with garden parties throughout Scotland, the Mull and Tiree garden party was at Craignure on Saturday 2nd July.	SWRI		L

	Papers pertaining to Tobermory, its founding, its history, its institutions and organisations. Tobermory was created as a planned village in 1788 by the BRITISH FISHERIES SOCIETY (Jean Dunlop, "The British Fisheries Society" 1786-1893.) A brief history of the town may be found in Olive Brown & Jean Whittaker "A Walk Round Tobermory" The oldest part of the town was created round three sides of a square formed by the salt store (where the Gallery completed 1879 now stands) the lodgings of the BFS officers (where the Aros Hall now stands). The third side was formed by the customs house, the only one of the three buildings still standing. It became the Post Office and served the town for many years. The multi-coloured painting of the buildings along Main Street is a relatively recent custom, dating from the mid 1970s	TOB		L

	Tobermory Burgh Minutes. The Burgh of Tobermory was established in 1875 and lasted for exactly 100 years until 1975. A brief account of its founding can be found in A Walk Round Tobermory (Brown and Whittaker 1988) pages 39-40 which describes some of the achievements of its commissioners (drains, running water, electricity, housing) and gives a list of its Provosts. The original minute books are deposited at Lochgilphead in the Argyll Archive. Over a period of time successive volumes were sent on loan to Tobermory and transcriptions made. Note that volume 2, which would have covered the years 1890/1-1904/5 went missing at an early stage.	TOB 10		L

	One of the earliest travellers to Mull was Edward Lhuyd, the antiquary and student of Celtic languages. He was warned by his friends that the highlands were a barbarous place he found only civility commenting only that he would have got on better had he had the language better. It was the "discovery" of Staffa that made Mull a must-see distination for travellers who would come by sea to Aros, disembark and cross the island to take ship and see its wonders. Prior to that, Iona had been the chief destination. Samuel Johnson and James Boswell visited in 1773, the poet Keats in 1818. Mendelssohn visited in 1829 and his Hebrides Overture set the seal on Staffa's popularity. Margaret Maclean Clephane at Torloisk welcomed visiting men of letters and musicians, entertaining, amongst others, Sir Walter Scott. In 1847, Queen Victoria paid a visit that MacBrayne's were to capitalise on in advertising the "Royal Route." In 1881 the railway to Oban was at last completed and in 1963 the opening of the pier at Craignure ushered in the age of regular road traffic to the island.	TRAVEL		L

	Originally MacQuarrie land, Ulva was sold in 1777 to the creditors of Lachlan Macquarrie, 16th and last chief of Ulva. In the 1780s the island and its owner, Colin Macdonald of Boisdale profited from the Kelp boom and his son, Ranald, styling himself "Staffa" owned the island until the collapse of kelp profits after the ending of the Napoleonic wars. In 1825, it was bought by Charles Macquarie, brother of Lachlan, Governor of N.S.W. and sold again in 1836 to settle Charles' debts to the Stirling lawyer, Francis William Clark. It remained in the Clark family until 1945 when it was sold to Edith Lady Congleton, passing to her daughter, Mrs Jean Howard whose son Jamie manages the estate. Material pertaining to Ulva's most famous son, Lachlan Macquarie (1761-1824), Governor of New South Wales, will be found mainly in MACQUARIE 02. A case study of an emigrant family of Mackinnons will be found in ULVA 02. Detailed estate plans of the island of Ulva are in PLAN CHEST 01. The Estate was put on the market by Jamie Howard in 2017. In February 2018 the Scottish Government granted North West Mull Community Woodland Company the right to buy the island for community ownership. A successful bid was made to the Scottish Land Fund for a large percentage of the purchase, the rest was raised by the community and the estate came into community ownership on 21st June 2018. 	Material pertaining to wrecks in the waters around Mull, together with any other pertinent information on wrecks and salvage. There are about 100 named wrecks in the waters around Tiree, Coll, Mull, Oban and the Firth of Lorne and these have formed the subject of a Museum display with the sites of the vessels marked on an admiralty chart. Fishing boats, cargo vessels, steamers and naval ships are all there and so too are a variety of nationalities. Norwegian, Swedish Danish, Dutch, French, and Latvian ships have all foundered in these waters, though some, such as the Aurania, were initially casualties from more distant waters. At least 7 vessels fell to U-boat torpedoes with one recorded success of a captured U-boat which was then wrecked off Tiree.	WRECKS		L
